Noted Speakers Will Be On Program For Farmers' Week, Jan. 17-21

From the opening session of Farmers' Week, the night of January 17th, until the closing event, the Farmers' Banquet the night of January 21st, the farmers and farm women of Missouri will have at their service constant instructions and demonstrations in every phase of farm life. The program for this year, the most important Farmers' Week ever held at the College of Agriculture, will contain features to meet every need of Missouri farm life.

The faculty of the College of Agriculture, the State Board of organization and founded the old Agriculture and the Agricultural Association of Missouri Cooperating, have spent the past year studying farm needs and have built their programs for Farmers' Week upon this basis.

These are some of the speak ers invited to address the evening audiences. Sir Auckland Geddes, English Ambassador to the United States, E. T. HER BIRTHDAY

By CHRISTINE HAYES.

McClure Newspaper Mrs. Kilcaine ambled up the next door neighbor's path, sank panting into the green rocker, and appropriated a palm leaf fan from the table at her elbow. Most people in Landsend were seeking relief from the August heat on their own vine-covered porches or in the seclusion of their coolest rooms with the blinds closed. Not Mrs. Kilcaine. No weather so extreme that a social hour was not worth to her the effort involved in reaching a place where it might be had. No sun too scoreling or drift too deep.

"My! That's a pretty waist you're wearing!" she declared with her first fully recovered breath.

"John gave it to me for my birthday," smiled the next door neighbor. "Land sakes! I wish Luther was more like him. I've been married to Luther 30 years, and every one of

'em he's given me something for my birthday that I had about as much use for as that old brindle cow has for an orange sweater like Lydia Bas-

"The first year it was a white lace kimono to eat breakfast in. Luther liked hearty breakfasts then just as well as he does now, and when I thought of the figure I'd cut frying chops in a white lace kimono-but to like 'em, and he's so absent-minded he never thinks of 'em again.

"Yes, of course I hint about what I'd like, but land! It's no use. The year I hinted the hardest for a plaid silk waist he brought home a plaid parasol that I wouldn't be seen on the

"What say? Oh, I'd exchange them in a minute, but Luther's queer that way. He just won't tell where he got them. You'd almost think he stole 'em, he hates to tell so bad.

"One year he brought home a big purple china dog. It wasn't so easy to get rid of that because he liked it him-Mary's Cemetery .- Springfield self and picked out a place for it to set, and spoke of it often. Yes, I know lots o' folks have 'em, but you never saw one like this one-ugly, my stars! I used to have nightmare about the And I couldn't think of any reasonable sounding way of its getting broken, till one day Mis' Hackett came to call with the twins-regular little imps, they were. And right away she thought of a scheme,

> "The dog was in the hall, so we put away everything else that was breakable, locked the doors that led into the other rooms, left one of the big smooth stones I use for doorsteps within reach, and went out into the garden leaving the twins in the hall. When we came back there was a pile of purple chins where the china dog had been before, and most of the glass was out of the window. We had made a I put up with the broken window cheerfully, and besides it bore up my

"Thanks; there's nothing like orangeade in hot weather.

"And this year-my birthday's a week from today-I knew just as well what he's going to give me. He's talked so much about my wearing my skirts shorter, not having 'em trail so, and the other night I saw him looking at the fashion page of a magazine, and I feel in my bones he's going to give me one of those disgraceful knee-high walst-low evening dresses, and like as not he'll remember to notice whether I wear it, the same as he did the purple dog. If I had it filled in and lengthened it would burt his feelings and I'm that upset about it."

Ten days later the next-door neighhor returned the call.

"I'm so mad!" snapped Mrs. Kilcaine in greeting. "Luther never give me a thing!"

How Faces Impress. Sidney Smith used to say of a certain quarrelsome man, "His very face is a breach of the peace." Until you happen to light upon face of this character, one often fails to realize what a very noticeable thing a face may be, observes Paul Hayden in the New York Commercial.

Personally, we never get over the shock of the lineup before us in a subway car on those rare occasions when we travel in that latest invention of our boasted civilization a few hours after midnight. On the other hand, we maintain that a look into the face, either asleep or awake, of a certain godchild of ours is as thorough joy as an Oscar Wilde poem or a half-hour at a symphony concert. Look to your face-not so much what it is but what you can do with

A Dangerous Doctor.

In a certain New England village there lives a doctor noted for his reckless automobile driving. One day when he was summoned to the tele phone a woman's voice inquired whether the doctor intended to drive that afternoon.

"I hardly think so," replied the physician. "But why do you ask?" "Well," resumed the voice, "I want to send my little daughter downtown on an errand if you are not."
